The sugar refinery plant consists of two five-story buildings separated by a narrow alley running from Washingten street. Halfway through this alley is a pit 5 fact deep, into which the exhaust from the engine is blown. There is generally two feet or more of boiling hot water in the bottom of the pit.

According to Nolan, Joyce was drinking in a saloon in Essex street late last night with a lot of employees of the refinery. He was troublesome and noisy and had some money, which he displayed. Nolan left him after trying to get him to go home.

A watchman in the refinery plant, passing through the alley between the two buildings, happened to glance into the pit to-day and saw the body. The fiesh had been boiled from the hands. There were heavy cuts in the forcehead and on the top of the Bloodstains in the alley showed the man had been carried in from Washington street and dumped into the Joyce came to Jersey City frem Phil-mielphia two months ago. He boarded with Mrs. Mary Barlow. When he left the house yesterday he had $15, the re-mainder of his salary, which he had soliceted the day before. He had $1.20 when he met his death. The sugar re-finery people hold to the theory that. Joyce fell into the pit, which is pro-tected by a railing two feet high. The body was, found in a sitting posture, which disapproves, according to the po-lice, the assertion that Joyce stumbled over the railing. If he had fallen in he would have landed on his head.
